“The nine years I spent at Rundle College forever sit among the most enjoyable and formative times of my life. I’m of the opinion education is far less about the content you absorb and more about learning how to learn, finding what you are passionate about, interacting with other people, and discovering how to face challenges in life; these are the lessons that will define you and will govern what you give and take from the world. In all of these areas I feel I gained a great deal from Rundle. For me, Rundle was a place to explore a variety of interests. It pushed me in ways that have recurrently helped me in my life. I am grateful to have gone through nine years in a school that prepared me as best as anyone can hope to be.”
